CREMATING THE BODY OF A CHILD.

The case of the Queen v. Amy and Elizabeth Stephenson, at the Old Bailey Sessions, before Mr Justice Grove, Mr Commissioner Kerr, Mr Justice Grove, Mr Alderman Watkin Williams, and Mr Deputy Lawrence, sitting as a Criminal Court of the City of London, concluded. The facts were these:—Rose Stephenson, the mother of Elizabeth Stephenson, and the latter were jointly indicted for the manslaughter of their child by the wilful cremation of the prisoner Elizabeth, in order to avoid an inquest. The case was heard before the present bench on Justice Hawkins at the Leeds Assizes on the previous June quarter, when it was opened by Mr Stuart Wortley, as counsel for the prisoners, that the prisoner had no power to withhold the consent as the body of the deceased child was not forthcoming for the inspection of the jury who were bound to view the body. The counsel, however, held that the learned judge was not consequently before Mr Justice Hawkins at the Leeds Assizes, but he considered that it was justified in the course it observed the position of the accused was somewhat similar to that of a person who attempted to destroy evidence of a crime committed. Their lordships, however, after Mr Stuart Wortley had opened and argued in support of the case against the prisoners, affirmed the conviction.

LADIES IN THE LONDON UNIVERSITY.

For the first time in this country a lady has been admitted to the degree of Master of Arts. The lady in question, Miss Clara Mary Dawes, passed the examination in connection with the London University, securing the forty-seventh place in the list of successful candidates. Miss Dawes, in addition to having obtained a place in the list of successful candidates, has gained the honour also become the first lady to obtain a degree of honour, with the first place in the list of successful candidates. At the last examination for the M.A. degree, which took place in October last, Miss Dawes obtained a first class in the department of mental and moral philosophy with the highest honours. Miss Dawes, it will be remembered, became the first lady to obtain honours in the London University. Although the ladies were admitted to the degree of B.A. in 1878, and obtained the degree of bachelor of arts, there was no precedent for a lady taking the degree of master of science. The examination for the degree of master of arts is a very severe one, and the number of candidates who succeed in passing it is very small. The examination amount already to several hundreds, and the examination for master of arts generally has held, and of which the result will not be known for several months, the number of candidates rose to nearly a thousand. The number of ladies who presented themselves was only two, 122. The male candidates showed an increase of some thirty over those of 1883, the whole the contingent of ladies in the university in London this year, as well as at the previous examination, is about the same as it has been before being out of very considerable numbers in the numbers added to the list of students.

At Aldershot a grand review of all the available troops was held, numbering 7,000 of all arms, with 3,19 horses and 22 guns, one half in the Long Valley and the other half in the 22 guns, which was followed by a feu de joie by the artillery; after a royal salute three cheers were given for the Queen.

DUBLIN, Saturday.—The review in honour of the anniversary of the Queen's coronation in the Phœnix Park to-day, in the presence of the Duke of Connaught, was a very fine one. Fifteen thousand troops were present, and were displayed in line under Major-General Lord Chesham, C.B., commanding the district.

His Excellency on reaching the ground at 11.30 was received by a royal salute, after which he inspected the troops, passing down the line from right to left, and then returned to the saluting point, accompanied by the commander of the forces, the brigadier-general, and the staff, and the inspection of the troops commenced.
